

Who I Would Like to Spend a Day With

Most people have someone they would like to meet. These people are normally people who are well known. Most of the time they have a special quality that is desired by the person who wants to meet that person. The person I would most like to spend the day with is Harry Potter because he has courage, intelligence, and he is a friendly person.

First of all, I would like to meet and spend some time with Harry Potter because he is courageous. People who have courage always try to stand up for what they think is right. A perfect example of Harry Potter showing his courage is his many fights with Malfoy and Voldemort. Malfoy is always mean to people and thinks that he is better than people who are not like himself. Harry has never got along with Malfoy and never hides it, which gives other people the strength to not listen to Malfoy because of this courage Harry shows. Voldemort has always been an enemy of Harry's. He tried to kill him when he was very young and has had many plans to do so while Harry has been older. Harry always tries to fight against Voldemort and save the day.

Harry Potter is also intelligent. Being intelligent is a great thing because it helps you to run your everyday life more smoothly. It also helps Harry in doing more challenging things like trying to save the day. Harry was able to figure out that he needed to speak in snake to open the chamber of secrets. This shows that he is quick on his feet and he is able to figure out stuff as he goes along, which is a very good trait. He is able to deal with the challenges that happen to him during the years he was attending school. He was able to pass each year while he was at school, which is not an easy achievement. He is also intelligent in knowing that he needs to be friendly to other people.

Harry Potter is a very kind and friendly person. He never makes fun of people and he always treats everyone the same no matter what type of creature it is. If you are nice to Harry, he will be a good friend to you. He always is nice to everyone that is nice to him. An example of this would be when he sets Dobby, a house elf, free, which is a nice thing to do because his owners were very mean to him. He also shows his kindness when he talks to his teachers, even if the teacher is mean to him he is still nice to them while they are in sight.

In conclusion, Harry Potter would be a great person to spend a day with. He shows that he is a great person to be with because he stands up for what he thinks is right. This courage is an admirable trait to have. Also being with someone who is intelligent like Harry Potter would make the conversations interesting. The most important reason to spend the day with Harry Potter is because he is a friendly person. These are the reasons why I would like to spend the day with Harry Potter.